WELCOME TO METRO PHILLY

ALEK KORAB, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Here we are: The president of the United States will meet the leader of North Korea in a historic summit to try and bring peace to the Korean peninsula. Or you can look at it another way: A 71-year-old infantile egomaniac will meet a 36-year-old infantile egomaniac and they will discuss the size of their rockets. No one knows what will happen – it could be anything from a Nobel Prize to total annihilation. One thing's for sure: It won't be boring. So check metro.us for the latest updates and pick up Wednesday's Metro for the analysis. Well ... if there will be Wednesday ...

74 ARRESTED IN GLOBAL EMAIL FRAUD CRACKDOWN

1 U.S. authorities said on Monday that 74 people had been arrested in a global crackdown on email fraud scams, in which criminals have attempted to steal billions of dollars from businesses and individuals. The cases involve a growing type of fraud known as "business email compromise" that targets employees with access to corporate finances. The fraudsters send emails that appear to be from trusted corporate executives or vendors, which instruct targeted employees to wire funds to accounts controlled by criminals.The same groups also ran similar scams targeting individuals, including real-estate buyers and the elderly, the bureau said. Nearly $2.4 million was seized in the six-month operation dubbed "Operation Wire Wire" and about $14 million in fraudulent wire transfers was recovered, according to the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation. Of those arrested, 42 were in the United States, 29 in Nigeria, and the others in Canada, Mauritius, and Poland, the FBI said.

TEXAS FAMILY SUES U.S. OVER CHURCH MASSACRE

2 A couple whose nine relatives were among the 26 people fatally shot in a Texas church massacre in November has sued the U.S. government for $50 million, saying its "institutional failures" played a part in the murders, court filings on Friday showed. The lawsuit filed this week in federal court in Texas and made public on Friday said the U.S. Air Force acted negligently when it failed to report the criminal record of gunman Devin Kelley to a U.S. database, which could have prevented him from legally purchasing an assault rifle used in the killings. Air Force officials were not immediately available for comment but have previously said they do not comment on specific claims. Legal experts have said the Air Force would not be able to claim federal immunity in the case, but cautioned any lawsuits faced a prolonged battle. The lawsuit was filed on behalf of the parents of Bryan Holcombe, who was near the pulpit of the small church in Sutherland Springs when Kelley opened fire. Holcombe was shot in the back and died on the church's floor. The family lost eight others in the attack.

SECURITY SCARE DIVERTS FLIGHT TO IRELAND

4 A United Airlines flight from Rome to Chicago was diverted to Ireland's Shannon Airport on Monday after a message perceived as a potential security concern was discovered onboard, Irish police and airline officials said. The message made reference to a bomb on the plane, a source with knowledge of the investigation told Reuters. The 207 passengers and 11 crew members disembarked from the Boeing 767-330 at Shannon Airport at 2:15 p.m. local time, according to Jim Molloy, a representative of Ireland's police force. The passengers of flight UA971 were in the process of being searched, he said in an emailed statement, but gave no further details about the nature of the threat. United said in a statement that the landing was due to "a potential security concern," but declined to comment further. "After assessing the situation, our crew made the decision to divert to the nearest available airport," it said. "Additional security screenings will be performed on all customers and baggage." The airline said on Twitter that the flight was canceled and would depart for Chicago on Tuesday.

'FAIR TRADE, FOOL TRADE,' TRUMP'S TWEETS SPEW IRE

5 President Donald Trump fired off a volley of tweets on Monday venting anger on NATO allies, the European Union and Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau in the wake of a divisive G7 meeting over the weekend. The escalating clash over trade between Washington and some of its closest global partners cast a cloud over Trump's efforts to make history in nuclear talks in Singapore on Tuesday with Kim Jong Un of North Korea, one of America's bitterest foes. Having left the Group of Seven summit in Canada early, Trump's announcement that he was backing out of the joint communique torpedoed what appeared to be a fragile consensus on the trade dispute between Washington and its top allies. "Fair trade is now to be called fool trade if it is not reciprocal," said Trump, who flew from Canada to Singapore on Sunday to prepare for the first-ever summit between a U.S. and North Korean leader. "Sorry, we cannot let our friends, or enemies, take advantage of us on trade anymore. We must put the American worker first!"

President Donald Trump and North Korean dictator Kim Jong Un will come face-to-face Tuesday in a historic summit in Singapore. GETTY IMAGES

Trump, Kim meet for historic Singapore summit

But whether progress will be made between the U.S. and North Korea remains anyone's guess.

MIGUEL VELAZQUEZ
letters@metro.us

The U.S. and North Korea are waiting with bated breath for a summit that is set to happen Tuesday, after almost 70 years of bitter rivalry between the two countries.

The encounter between President Donald Trump and dictator Kim Jong Un is considered one of the hardest-to-predict events in diplomatic history and will certainly be remembered for centuries to come — no matter the result.

"We have to be realistic with expectations," Ali Riaz, professor of political science at Illinois State University explained to Metro. "I don't expect a dramatic breakthrough. Instead I expect both leaders to lay out their terms and expectations. Kim Jong Un will have his wish list, which will include security assurance and promises of immediate economic assistance from the U.S. He will try to push for a commitment from Trump of U.S. withdrawal from the region. Trump, on the other hand, is expected to ask for an announcement of denuclearization with a clear roadmap."

Prior to the summit, Kim Jong Un basked in the global spotlight as well after meeting with his southern counterpart, South Korea President Moon Jae-in, in April this year. During the peace talks, he already committed to "complete denuclearization" of the country, aiming to establish permanent peace on the peninsula.

On the other hand, Trump's administration constantly insisted on "complete, verifiable and irreversible" denuclearization, but now took a step back and agreed on the process to happen "by phases."

In any case, this decision goes beyond North Korea and the U.S. The allied countries of each side are also anxiously waiting for the results of this historic encounter.

"I don't expect a dramatic breakthrough. Instead I expect both leaders to lay out their terms and expectations."

Professor of political science at Illinois State University Ali Riaz

"I don't think Kim is acting without the consent of China," Riaz concluded. "Any agreement will have to have the blessings of Chinese leadership. An agreement which will reduce U.S. presence and influence in the region is not only beneficial to China, but is its primary strategic objective. Same goes with Russia. The invitation to Kim by Putin indicates that Russia doesn't want to be left out. Japan has most to lose if Trump agrees to a bad deal about regional security. South Korea will remain the key player in going forward; without South Korea on board there won't be any success."

Q&A

SUNG-YOON LEE
Professor of Korean studies at Kim Koo-Korea Foundation

What should we expect from this summit?
Both Trump and Kim will gain political victories from the summit. Trump will claim to have defused a tense standoff, tamed the North Korean leader, and compelled North Korea to start the process of denuclearization. But Kim Jong Un will walk away with far bigger gains. Kim will have engaged the U.S. in yet another protracted negotiation process with no final negotiated agreement in sight, during which time he will buy time and money with which to perfect his own nuclear posture review. In fact, North Korea will have deterred the U.S. from even thinking about a preemptive strike, compelled the U.S. and other UN member states to stop enforcing sanctions against Pyongyang, laid the foundation for the resumption of generous aid from South Korea and China, and deterred other states from ramping up diplomatic pressure against Pyongyang. "Maximum pressure" will be dead.

Will denuclearization come quickly?
North Korea will make small concessions like readmitting IAEA inspectors into its main nuclear site in Yongbyon, etc., but stall on dismantling its nuclear apparatuses or shipping out nuclear warheads. A nation that has worked for half a century to develop nukes and has to contend with a far more successful, freer, richer Korean state across the border does not bargain away the one ace card (nuclear threat capability) it has that may one day enable the inferior North to prevail over the superior South.

Could both leaders reach an agreement?
Pyongyang has been playing this two-act play, provocation followed by placation (provoke relentlessly, then change the tune from molto agitato to placido and put on a fake peace ploy), for decades. For Pyongyang, it always pays to provoke. But it pays even more to placate after provoking. After a banner ballistic year in 2017, in which Kim established his threat credibility, 2018 is the perfect time to reap the harvest on the seeds of provocations. Pyongyang is very crafty, and does not just escalate endlessly. It knows when to come down a rung or two.

What will happen if things go wrong?
South Korea has grown rich over the past decades; hence, it favors de-escalation and the status quo. Seoul does not seek a German model of unification, absorption of the less-successful neighbor. On the other hand, North Korea has to live with a richer South that is a magnet to its own people; hence, it favors the Vietnamese model of unification, communization by force.

At the U.N. General Assembly, Donald Trump stated he could destroy North Korea. Do you expect him to take those words back?
It will be politically difficult for Trump to walk away first from a deal he has endorsed. Hence, Trump will try to cling on to the agreement, even as North Korea demurs, cheats and blatantly violates the deal. Advantage North Korea.

What role do China, South Korea, Japan and Russia play?
In the next few months, Kim will hold summit meetings with Vladimir Putin and Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, further bolstering his own image as a legitimate global statesman instead of a ruthless, weird dictator. It's exactly what his father, Kim Jong Il, did in 2000-2002. Kim Jong Il made his first visit to China as the national leader in May 2000, held the first-ever inter-Korean summit in June (and pocketed $500 million in cash from the South), received President Putin in Pyongyang in July, sent a special envoy to President Clinton in October, received Secretary of State Madeleine Albright in Pyongyang later the same month, paid another visit to China in January 2001, visited Putin in Moscow in August that year, and received Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi in Pyongyang in Sept 2002. As a result, Kim got his neighbors to legitimate him as a reasonable leader with whom the U.S. could do nuclear business. Kim Jong Un is doing the same today, and Trump is walking right into this elaborate trap.

A LOOK AT NORTH KOREA'S 6 ALLIES

China: The powerful nation has been North Korea's closest ally as its neighbor to the north and west. But since Kim took power in 2011, the relationship has cooled. Chinese President Xi Jinping is said to have a low opinion of Kim and his nuclear weapons program. Beijing has repeatedly asked Pyongyang in vain to cease its nuclear tests and ballistic missile launches.

Russia: U.S. relations with Russia have cooled tremendously and are at their worst since the end of the Cold War, as stated by its foreign ministry. So it comes as no surprise that Moscow has remained silent on the current U.S.-North Korea situation. North Korea shares a narrow northeasterly border with Russia, and the two nations have been close allies since the Cold War.

Bulgaria: North Korea made an alliance with Bulgaria when it was under communist rule in 1948 and signed a bilateral cooperation agreement in 1970. Bulgaria is now Kim's only ally in Europe.

Benin: Yet another former communist state with ties to North Korea. In 2013, North Korean state media quoted the state's former President Thomas Boni Yayim, describing relations between North Korea and Benin as saying "excellent ones of friendship and tradition."

The Democratic Republic of Congo: North Korea has forged ties with the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), which is notoriously unstable.

Madagascar: North Korea has an unlikely historic alliance with Madagascar. During the 1970s, North Korea helped to build the fledgling state's presidential lavoloha Palace and new waterways free of charge.

Trump upbeat ahead of North Korean summit; Kim visits Singapore sites

President Donald Trump said on Monday his historic summit with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un in Singapore could "work out very nicely" as officials from both countries sought to narrow differences on how to end a nuclear stand-off on the Korean peninsula.

Kim, one of the world's most reclusive leaders, made an evening tour of sites on Singapore's waterfront, on the eve of the summit due to start on Tuesday at a nearby resort island.

In a tweet early on Tuesday, just hours before the summit, Trump said staff-level meetings between the countries were "going well and quickly ... but in the end, that doesn't matter. We will all know soon whether or not a real deal, unlike those of the past, can happen!"

While Trump was optimistic about prospects for the summit between the old foes, U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo injected a note of caution ahead of the first-ever meeting of sitting U.S. and North Korean leaders, saying it remained to be seen whether Kim was sincere about his willingness to denuclearize.

Officials from the two sides held last-minute talks aimed at laying the groundwork for a meeting that was almost unthinkable just months ago when the two leaders were exchanging insults and threats that raised fears of war.

But after a flurry of diplomatic overtures eased tension in recent months, the two leaders are now headed for a history-making handshake that U.S. officials hope could eventually lead to the dismantling of a North Korean nuclear program that threatens the United States.

Offering a preview to reporters, Pompeo said it could provide "an unprecedented opportunity to change the trajectory of our relationship and bring peace and prosperity" to North Korea.

However, he played down the possibility of a quick breakthrough and said the summit should set the framework for "the hard work that will follow," insisting that North Korea had to move toward complete, verifiable and irreversible denuclearization.

North Korea, though, has shwown little appetite for surrendering nuclear weapons it considers vital to the survival of Kim's dynastic rule.

Sanctions on North Korea would remain in place until that had happened, Pompeo said. "If diplomacy does not move in the right direction ... those measures will increase."

"North Korea has previously confirmed to us its willingness to denuclearize and we are eager to see if those words prove sincere," he said.

The White House later said discussions with North Korea had moved "more quickly than expected" and Trump would leave Singapore on Tuesday night, after the summit. He had earlier been scheduled to leave on Wednesday.

tured out on Monday evening.

The Swiss-educated leader, who is believed to be 34, has not left his isolated country since taking office in 2011 other than to visit China and the South Korean side of the border Demilitarized Zone, which separates the two Koreas.

His first stop was a waterfront park with futuristic installations, Gardens by the Bay, which boasts the largest glass greenhouse and tallest indoor waterfall in the world.

He joined Singapore's foreign minister, Vivian Balakrishnan, who took a selfie, before stopping at the Marina Bay Sands hotel, which resembles a giant surfboard perched on three tall columns, for a look out over the bright lights of the city from its rooftop garden and swimming pool.

On the way back to his hotel, Kim walked along a promenade near the Merlion, a giant statue, and fountain, of a mythical creature, half-lion, half-fish — Singapore's unofficial mascot.

The rare public appearance of Kim, waving and smiling to onlookers, adds to the more affable image of the young leader that has emerged since his summit in April with South Korean leader Moon Jae-in.

Just a few months ago, Kim was an international pariah accused of ordering the killing of his uncle, a half-brother and scores of officials suspected of disloyalty.

The White House said Trump would hold a one-on-one meeting with Kim on Tuesday on the small island of Sentosa. The two will later be joined by officials and have lunch together.

Many experts on North Korea, one of the most insular and unpredictable countries in the world, remain skeptical Kim will ever completely abandon nuclear weapons. They believe Kim's engagement is aimed at getting the United States to ease the crippling sanctions that have squeezed the impoverished country.

Kelsey Davenport, director for Nonproliferation Policy at the Arms Control Association, said there were signs that the gaps between the two sides were narrowing but there was also risk.

"Trump is likely to declare the summit a victory irrespective of the outcome, but if the two sides fail to reach a common understanding of denuclearization it will put at risk any process that the summit kicks off," he said.

"The process could be doomed before it begins."

Trump initially touted the potential for a grand bargain with North Korea to rid itself of a nuclear missile program that has advanced rapidly to threaten the United States.

But he has since lowered expectations, backing away from an original demand for North Korea's swift denuclearization.

He has said the talks would be more about starting a relationship with Kim for a negotiating process that would take more than one summit. REUTERS

Former NBA star Rodman arrives in Singapore for Trump-Kim summit

Former NBA star Dennis Rodman arrived in Singapore late on Monday for a summit between U.S. President Donald Trump and North Korean leader Kim Jong Un, saying he was "excited to be part of it."

There has been no indication Rodman would be involved in any official talks at the summit, which is aimed at getting North Korea to give up its nuclear weapons and missiles in exchange for economic incentives and security guarantees.

"It should go fairly well, but people should not expect so much for the first time," Rodman told reporters at the airport.

"The doors are opening."

Trump, asked last week if Rodman had been invited to Singapore, said, "No, he wasn't."

Rodman is one of a handful of Westerners to have visited reclusive North Korea and met Kim. He most recently traveled there a year ago as a private citizen.

After that five-day visit, Rodman told reporters, "I'm just trying to open the door."

This trip, like the last one, is sponsored by potcoin.com, the crypto-currency provider for the legal marijuana industry, Rodman said on Twitter.

Dennis Rodman GETTY IMAGES

Before Trump became president, Rodman appeared twice on his "Celebrity Apprentice" show and praised the billionaire real estate developer on Twitter during the 2016 presidential campaign.

Rodman has faced ridicule and criticism for his trips to North Korea, which some U.S. politicians and activists view as serving only as fodder for North Korean propaganda.

His earlier visits to North Korea included a basketball game he organized, an event chronicled in the documentary film "Big Bang in Pyongyang," which featured Rodman singing "Happy Birthday" to Kim, as well as scenes of inebriated and erratic behavior by the basketball Hall of Famer. REUTERS

After Starbucks incident, Philly police get new trespassing policy

City cops have a new "defiant trespassing" policy instituted in the wake of the Starbucks arrests.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

What's now known as "the Starbucks incident'" put Philadelphia in the national spotlight — in a bad way. Outrage over the April arrest of two black men for simply sitting in a Starbucks coffee shop in Rittenhouse Square is still being felt across the nation, but here in Philly, the police department has instituted a "defiant trespassing" policy to combat "racial bias" in its policies and practices.

"The department is committed to addressing any concerns about racial bias in the department's policies and practices," the police department said in its announcement of the policy. "After examining various aspects of the incident that took place at Starbucks coffee shop in Center City on April 12, 2018, department leadership recognized a need for a policy that would better guide officers when called to investigate and enforce defiant trespass complaints."

"The department is committed to addressing any concerns about racial bias in the department's policies and practices."
The Police Department

Police Commissioner Richard Ross issued Memorandum #18-02, which was intended to "address what happens when officers are called to a private business that operates a quasi-public space," specifically by giving officers and their supervisors "greater discretion."

At first glance, some experts say the policy, if upheld, could be a step forward.

Under the policy, for an arrest to be made on misdemeanor defiant trespassing, five conditions must be met, including that the owner or authorized manager has asked the person to leave and been refused in the presence of police and must personally sign a criminal complaint confirming their wish to prosecute the individual. A supervisor must approve the arrest and can refuse if the complainant "is attempting to misuse the enforcement powers of the police."

The preliminary steps to a trespassing arrest have also been rewritten to "avoid misuse of police authority by business owners and the appearance of any impropriety by the officers." Now, officers are directed to first "attempt to de-escalate and mediate the disturbance between the owner and the offender" before having a crisis-intervention-team-trained officer respond and requesting a supervisor.

Some are already praising the policy. "It took integrity to admit that the arrests should not have happened. It took even more to follow through with the development of a new policy on incidents involving alleged trespass," City Councilman Kenyatta Johnson said in a statement. "After preliminary review of the new policy, I believe it provides clear, thorough, and well-reasoned guidance to police personnel."

But Paula T. Edgar, president of New York's Metropolitan Black Bar Association, said the policy sounds most helpful as a measure of "accountability" in addressing racial disparities in trespassing enforcement, which she said was evident in the Starbucks incident.

"Because they were black men, there was a quicker rush to judgment about them being in the wrong and then being detained," Edgar said. "You want the community to be able to trust the police. If there's fear there without something even having occurred, then that trust has already eroded before you've even had an interaction."

"After preliminary review of the new policy, I believe it provides clear, thorough, and well-reasoned guidance to police personnel."

THE STARBUCKS INCIDENT

A video of Donte Robinson and Rashon Nelson being arrested in Starbucks at 19th and Spruce in Philly on April 12, purportedly for not ordering anything, sitting at a table and refusing to leave, went viral internationally.

The two men have since settled a legal action with the city in return for $200,000 in funds to start a School District program for entrepreneurs. They settled with Starbucks corporation for a confidential financial settlement, and an agreement in which they will advise the company on diversity matters, and also get financial aid from Starbucks to complete college.

Starbucks closed 8,000 U.S. locations for part of the day on May 29 for companywide "implicit bias training" of its employees.

Philly shoplifting suspect killed while allegedly driving at cop

Activists are calling for an investigation after an unarmed Philadelphia woman who was wanted for shoplifting was shot and killed by Philly police.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

A Philly woman allegedly wanted for shoplifting was shot and killed by a South Jersey police officer whom she was allegedly driving toward in an SUV.

LaShanda Anderson, 36, was unarmed and driving the SUV when around 3:45 p.m. on June 9 she was fatally shot by police at a strip mall near the Deptford Mall in South Jersey. A female passenger, identified as Chanel Barnes, 27, was in the car and taken into custody. A male, Raoul Gadson, reportedly fled on foot.

All three are suspected in a recent theft at the Marshall's department store in the Deptford Mall. The Deptford Township police officer who shot Anderson was among those responding to the theft. All three also have multiple previous arrests in Philadelphia on charges of theft and unlawful taking, and Anderson was identified by Delaware State Police in 2017 as a member of a theft ring targeting Marshall's.

> "I demand a transparent and impartial investigation."
> South Jersey civil-rights activist Walter Hudson

Police say Anderson drove a rented Nissan Armada SUV toward police, hit one officer with an open driver-side door and was driving at a sergeant who fired three shots, fatally striking Anderson, the Inquirer reported.

Police had been called to the strip mall, Deptford Crossing, which is across the street from the Deptford Mall, after Marshall's security recognized members of the trio from a company security bulletin. Police said that upon arrival, security was struggling with Gadson, who fled on foot after seeing officers. Anderson and Barnes got into their SUV to flee with "substantial merchandise" in tow, police said, and drove off before encountering officers and being fired upon.

LaShanda Anderson, wanted for a string of Marshall's theft, was shot dead by Deptford police while allegedly driving at a cop outside a Marshall's she had allegedly just robbed. DELAWARE STATE POLICE

Barnes was arrested and is in Salem County jail on theft charges. Gadson remains wanted on assault and theft charges.

South Jersey civil rights activist Walter Hudson said that the account Anderson's death from police and prosecutors should not be taken "at face value," and called for state authorities to step in and review the incident.

"With the climate and conditions of the police and community relations in America, when there is a shooting death of black and brown people in America, we must demand transparency in the investigation," Hudson said in a statement. "Because of the close working relationship with the local prosecutor office of Gloucester County, and Deptford Township police, we cannot take their account as to what happened to Ms. LaShanda Anderson at face value. By that, I am calling on the Attorney General of New Jersey to take over the investigation and release all audio and camera footage leading up to the death of Ms. Lashanda Anderson. I demand a transparent and impartial investigation."

The Gloucester County Prosecutor's Office did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

New Jersey governor signs sports betting bill into law

New Jersey Gov. Phil Murphy on Monday signed a bill to legalize sports betting, opening the door for the state to begin regulating and taxing the activity at casinos and racetracks.

"Our casinos in Atlantic City and our racetracks throughout our state can attract new business and new fans, boosting their own long-term financial prospects," Murphy said in a statement. "This is the right move for New Jersey and it will strengthen our economy."

Monmouth Park Racetrack, where the U.S. unit of U.K.-based William Hill PLC has already built a sports book, expects to take its first bet at 10:30 a.m. on Thursday, a park spokesman told Reuters.

"Our casinos in Atlantic City and our racetracks throughout our state can attract new business and new fans, boosting their own long-term financial prospects."

New Jersey Gov. Phil Murphy

State gaming and racing regulators, which are scheduled to meet this week, still have to issue emergency regulations to cover the roll out at facilities that already have sports betting licenses.

Murphy's signature positions New Jersey to be the second U.S. state to potentially roll out full-scale sports wagering, after Delaware last week.

Some states are rushing to implement sports betting in the wake of a U.S. Supreme Court decision in May that overturned a 1992 law banning it in all but a few places, including Delaware, which had only allowed limited wagers.

Gov. Phil Murphy made New Jersey the second state in the nation to legalize sports betting. GETTY IMAGES

Gross sports betting revenues at New Jersey's casinos and horse racetracks will be taxed at 8.5 percent. After 30 days, the state will allow online bets as well, which will be taxed at 13 percent.

People placing bets must be at least 21 years old. Athletes, coaches, referees and other people with influence over games or access to confidential information are not allowed to bet on their own league's sport.

Betting is also prohibited on high school and college games taking place in New Jersey or involving the state's own such teams.

Professional sports leagues, most of which fought states' efforts to legalize sports betting for years, say the New Jersey bill does not contain any of the fraud fighting provisions they need to protect the integrity of games.

Trans woman arrested trying to burn 'Blue Lives Matter' flag at Philly Pride

A trans woman was arrested at Philly Pride 2018 for trying to burn a pro-cop flag.

A trans woman from New Jersey was arrested during Sunday's Philadelphia Pride Parade for allegedly trying to burn a pro-cop "Blue Lives Matter" flag at 12th and Locust streets.

ReeAnna Segin, 18, of Woodbine, New Jersey, was arrested for "attempting to set a thin blue line American Flag on fire while in a crowd" at 12:10 p.m. on June 10, a police report said. The incident was in the heart of Philly's Gayborhood during the Philadelphia Pride Parade. She reportedly did not actually start a fire but was about to when police spotted her with lighter fluid.

The flag was an American flag design with blue stripes, referred to as a Blue Lives Matter flag, typically used as a pro-police symbol.

Segin now faces charges of attempted arson, risking a catastrophe and recklessly endangering another person.

She was held on $5,000 bail. Supporters posted her bail on June 11 but were still waiting for her release as of press-time, while posting complaints on social media that she had been detained at Curran Fromhold Correctional Facility, a men's jail, and criticizing media for posting her "dead name."

"We cannot release much information at this time, but this incident highlights why cops should not be allowed at any Pride parades."
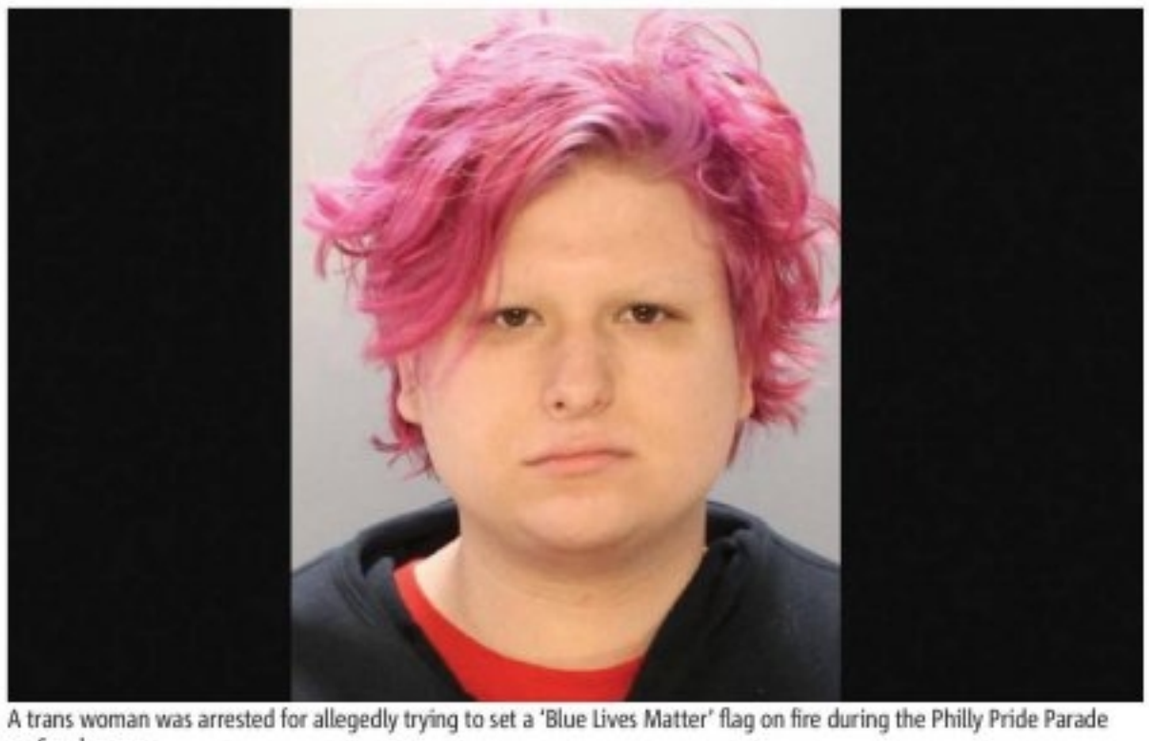
Philly Socialists

"Pride was a riot started by a trans woman of color protesting police violence. Yesterday a trans woman was arrested at Philly pride for trying to burn a 'blue lives matter' flag. There is nothing more in the spirit of pride than what she did," said a Twitter user identified as Anna Moone. "She is a hero & should be celebrated."



A trans woman was arrested for allegedly trying to set a 'Blue Lives Matter' flag on fire during the Philly Pride Parade on Sunday. PPD

Philly Socialists, who supported Segin and raised funds for her bail along with the Philly for REAL Justice group, said in a statement: "We cannot release much information at this time, but this incident highlights why cops should not be allowed at any Pride parades. "Though Pride has become a celebration of all that the LGBT movement has accomplished, we cannot forget that the struggle against state oppression is far from over."

Can humans get dog flu?

No one knows for sure whether dog flu can spread to humans. GETTY IMAGES

If you're a dog-lover, it's not unusual to share your bed and maybe even some human food with your beloved pet. In return, your dog gives you a ton of love and tail wags, but might give you something else instead: dog flu.

Wait, can humans get dog flu?

Scientists are worried dogs might be the next animal to cause a big flu outbreak. A study published recently in mBio found that influenza viruses from pigs — already known to transfer dangerous swine flu to humans — can "jump" into dogs, evolve and then infect humans.

And flu in humans that originated in animals has happened in the past. The 2009 outbreak of H1N1 — known as swine flu — first came from birds. The virus "jumped to pigs, exchanged some of its genes with previously circulating swine viruses and then jumped from pigs into humans," according to the American Society for Microbiology.

Dog flu is already similar to human flu — and like human flu, there was a dog flu outbreak throughout the United States in winter 2017.

"Canine influenza is very similar to the human form in that it is self-limiting and not life-threatening," Dr. Robin Brennen, senior medical director at Animal Care Centers of New York City, told Metro earlier this year.

Dog flu symptoms are also like the human flu with coughing, sneezing, fever, nasal and eye discharge, a decrease in appetite and general mood changes — and if not treated, it can turn into pneumonia and be fatal.

But is dog flu a danger to humans? The study authors say that "further research is greatly needed to assess the pandemic risk" of dog flu viruses and that no humans have contracted dog flu yet. They only studied dogs in China, and it's not certain that the same process is happening in other dogs throughout the world.

So, can humans get dog flu? It's not certain, but if this past flu season has taught us anything, it's that anything can happen.

Trump keeps ripping up papers that need to be preserved

A team of archivists has been taping them back together. "The lowest form of work you can take on without having to empty the trash cans," said one.

letters@metro.us

Future historians will note this was the first presidency to be held together by Scotch tape.

President Donald Trump keeps tearing up papers that are required by law to be preserved, a new report says.

Under the Presidential Records Act of 1978, the White House is required to keep presidential papers for security and historical purposes. (It was enacted because of — wait for it — Watergate.) But White House aides have had a difficult time impressing this upon President Trump, who habitually rips papers up and routinely throws them, confetti-like, in the trash or on the floor, reports Politico.

"It was the craziest thing ever. He ripped papers into tiny pieces."
Solomon Lartey

Eventually, Trump's staff just gave up, and two records-management analysts from the National Archives were enlisted to tape together the papers Trump had shredded. White House aides would collect the fragments and send them next door to the Old Executive Office Building, where the piecework would begin, "like a jigsaw puzzle." The taped-up papers would then be filed in the National Archives.

This is coming to light because two men who worked on the taping — Solomon Lartey and Reginald Young Jr. — were abruptly fired without explanation, and they want one, says Politico.

Young, a senior records management analyst, said he never had been asked to do anything like it in nearly two decades of government service. "We had to endure this under the Trump administration," Young said. "I'm looking at my director, and saying, 'Are you guys serious?' We're making more than $60,000 a year, we need to be doing far more important things than this. It felt like the lowest form of work you can take on without having to empty the trash cans."

President Trump is known for throwing papers into the trash like confetti. GETTY IMAGES

Lartey and Young weren't the only ones — their whole department was assigned to the task. Lartey, who had nearly 30 years of experience and made $65,000 a year, said the papers they would receive included notated newspaper clippings and letters from members of Congress. "I had a letter from [Senate Minority Leader Chuck] Schumer — he tore it up," he said. "It was the craziest thing ever. He ripped papers into tiny pieces."

By contrast, President Obama's first staff secretary said he never tossed any papers, which were preserved in a meticulous filing system. "All of the official paper that went into [the Oval Office], came back out again, to the best of my knowledge," Lisa Brown told Politico. "I never remember the president throwing any official paper away."

Trump, however, manually shreds anything he is done with — sometimes in half, sometimes into tiny bits, the site says.

As the poet Elvis Costello once said :"Welcome to the working week/Oh, I know it don't thrill you/I hope it don't kill you." And thus, we begin another week here at the Grumble! We received a bunch of great submissions over the weekend and here are the cream of the crop. Take it away!

STOP LEAVING SHOPPING CARTS IN THE PARKING LOT!

My pet peeve is lazy people who refuse to return grocery carts to corrals or designated areas. Some carts are left in handicap spaces, which is unfair for people who need this convenience.

On windy days carts are strewn all over parking lots causing damage to parked cars. I saw a woman put a cart directly behind a person's car.

I yelled to her, "So you are just gonna leave that behind my car?" She moved it, and then I got in my car which was parked several lanes over.

Season two of "Goliath" premieres this weekend. ALL PHOTOS BY AMAZON

Binge this now: Why you should watch Amazon's 'Goliath'

Billy Bob Thornton returns as disgraced lawyer Billy McBride.

Depending on who you ask, Billy Bob Thornton winning the Best Actor in a Drama Series trophy was one of the biggest surprises at the 2017 Golden Globe Awards. Your point of view will be informed by whether you had watched, let alone even heard of, the freshman Amazon series "Goliath." A legal drama created by television veteran David E. Kelley ("Ally McBeal," "The Practice"), the show follows disgraced lawyer named Billy McBride's (Thornton) attempt to redeem himself.

All eight episodes of the second season will begin streaming Friday, June 15, on Amazon Prime. Instead of angling for his old law firm, however, season two finds McBride taking on a murder case against a young boy pro bono, much to fellow lawyer Patty Solis-Papagian's (Nina Arianda) annoyance. Aside from season one's returning cast, these new episodes feature recurring and guest appearances by Mark Duplass, Lou Diamond Phillips and David Cross.

What is it about?

Before he became "disgraced," McBride was half of the successful law firm Cooperman McBride, which he co-founded with his then-partner, Donald Cooperman (William Hurt). After a murder suspect he got acquitted later killed an entire family, however, McBride washed out, fell deeper into alcoholism and took up residence at an extended-stay hotel on the Santa Monica Pier.

Billy Bob Thorton earned a Golden Globe Award in 2017 for his performance in the hit Amazon series.

When occasional cases don't turn him sober, his daughter, Denise (Diana Hopper), tries to.

Much like fellow Amazon series "Bosch," "Goliath" tells a different story arc each season. Many of the core characters and plot points remain the same, but the rest changes depending on whatever the arc demands. Season one had McBride pursue a wrongful-death suit against one of his former firm's biggest clients, putting him at odds with his ex-partner and many others. Season two, however, sees McBride take a murder case pro bono that may not be what it seems.

Why you should binge it

"Goliath" is worth a binge for three reasons. First, it's short. This isn't the most important reason, of course, but with "Peak TV" in full swing these days, time is precious, and the less time a new piece of entertainment takes, the better. The second and third reasons "Goliath" is worth your time are Thornton himself and the creative team behind the camera. The latter has suffered some turmoil, but the show has yet to suffer as a result.

Meet the cast

Again, Thornton is the main pull behind "Goliath," and for good reason. His Golden Globe Award-winning turn as McBride is simultaneously enjoyable and difficult to watch. But he's not the only fantastic part of the series. Arianda's Patty and Hopper's Denise keep the star on his toes, as does paralegal-cum-escort Brittany Gold (Tania Raymonde). Meanwhile, season two adds Ana de la Reguera, Morris Chestnut, Duplass, Phillips and Cross to the mix.

How to binge

All eight episodes of "Goliath" season one are available to stream for all Amazon Prime subscribers. When they drop Friday, June 15, all eight episodes of season two will also be available on Amazon Prime.

'Tag' is the 'big, studio comedy' Jake Johnson has been dying to make

The ultimate game of tag heads to the big screen. KYLE KAPLAN/ WARNER BROS. PICTURES

"We all knew what we were trying to do."

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

It's hard to pin Jake Johnson down.

While Johnson played Nick Miller in "New Girl" for seven seasons, he balanced that out with leading parts in the indie hits "Safety Not Guaranteed" and "Drinking Buddies," supporting roles in the blockbusters "Jurassic World" and "The Mummy," and he even branched out to co-write "Digging for Fire" and "Win It All."

Johnson's eclectic career choices have clearly worked wonders so far, as his inherent warmth and goofiness immediately elevates any project he is involved in.

These qualities have also always meant that Johnson would be the ideal addition to any mainstream comedic ensemble. Which, coincidentally, was the next cinematic box that

"Tag" races into theaters this weekend. WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Johnson wanted to tick off. That made the offer of Randy "Chilli" Chilliano in "Tag" just too good to turn down, as the outrageous comedy revolves around a group of tight-knit friends and the 30-year-long game of tag that kept them together.

Johnson recently told Metro that the immediate appeal of "Tag" was that it was a "big, studio comedy."

"We all knew what we were trying to do," Johnson says of his castmates Ed Helms, Jeremy Renner, Jon Hamm and Hannibal Buress. "And I thought, 'The laughs are good. There's a lot of fun set-pieces. It is ridiculous. It has some heart. There was nothing in it that I thought was offensive or mean-spirited.'

"I really wanted to make a popcorn movie." he adds. "Where people could just go, and if they didn't want to see a big franchise movie, or a sequel or a remake, if they just wanted to sit down and watch a big-laugh comedy with an ensemble that you like. I thought that was accomplished and that made me happy."

Johnson's positivity for "Tag" bled into its production, as the actor insisted it was just fun to make the movie with a "really good group of people." Unfortunately, those good vibes didn't manifest into an impromptu game of on-set tag, though.

"I am 40 years old," Johnson says. "I don't have much interest in playing tag. I have interest in shooting a movie about tag. So there was no running around and tagging each other."

Which was probably for the best, because Renner managed to break both of his arms just while shooting "Tag." Johnson made it very clear that he wasn't to blame for these injuries, pointing out that he didn't see the scene being shot. Although he did joke that it was "probably" somehow his fault indirectly.

It isn't a surprise to learn that Johnson didn't partake in a game of tag during production; he says he didn't even really like to play it when he was a child.

Instead, he just focused on "playing make-believe and wearing goofy clothes and wigs and using funny voices." Johnson is more than aware that that has paid dividends, as he enthusiastically pointed out "now I do it professionally."

"Tag" opens in theaters on June 15.

5 Outdoor entertaining essentials you need to get this summer

Get ready for summer with these outdoor essentials.

Spruce up your backyard with these must-have items.

KATELYN CHEF
letters@metro.us

Now that the warm weather is here to stay, it's time to dream about backyard barbecues, quick escapes to the shore and friendly badminton matches at the neighbor's house. Summertime is the season to make the most out of your outdoor living space. Aside from friends, tunes and food, here are our top five outdoor living essentials.

1 Big green EGG

Investing in the increasingly popular EGG ceramic cooking method (available in sizes mini to 2XL) is investing in your guests' taste buds (seriously, they'll be impressed). Whether you're dreaming of a juicy sirloin, perfectly roasted chicken or fire stone-cooked pizza, your wish is the EGG's command.
Available on Amazon, $240

2 Outdoor speakers

Music can make any seasonal gathering more enjoyable. Instead of a bulky boom box sitting on the nearby window seal, opt for something more discreet. Introducing speaker rocks, available in a variety of shapes, natural colors and sizes. Surely, these stones will be rocking with summertime jams.
Available at OutdoorSpeakerDepot.com, $114

3 Cornhole set

True, badminton may be fun and backyard volleyball is quite thrilling, but a friendly cornhole toss is even better. Not only will a palm-printed cornhole set by DenyDesigns brighten up your patio, it'll bring hours of entertainment to any picnic you host. If pink palms aren't your thing, perhaps a nautical whale printed cornhole set is more suitable.
Available at DenyDesigns.com, $229-$300

5 Patio tableware

What you dine on outdoors is different than what you eat off of indoors. Outdoor cutlery should be bright, fun, durabl and playful. Thankfully, H&M's whimsical watermelon, pineapple and lemon prints have been stamped on plenty of melamine tableware and iced-tea pitchers.

Dine outdoors at Le Virtu on East Passyunk. KATERI LIKOUDIS

Feeling French? Head over to Bistrot La Minette. PEGGY BAUD-WOOLSEY

The best restaurants with outdoor seating

Enjoy a fabulous meal with a side of sunshine.

JENNIFER LOGUE
jennifer.logue@metro.us

Looking for restaurants in Philadelphia with the best outdoor seating? Now that the weather has finally warmed up, it's the perfect time to take your meal outside. Whether you're in the mood for Italian, French, American or any kind of cuisine with a great view of the river, you have plenty of options for outdoor dining in Philadelphia. Here are a few of our favorites.

24 Philadelphia
24philly.com

Craving wood-fired pizza and a stellar view of the Schuylkill River? Look no further than 24 from chef Jose Garces. Open for lunch, aperitivo and dinner during the week and also brunch on the weekends, you can't go wrong with any of their pizza. If you're trying to eat healthier, they also have a number of yummy salads, like the verde (arugula, fava beans, bianco sardo, avocado, white balsamic). The happy hour is really good too, and they even have wines on draft.

Le Virtu
levirtu.com
This East Passyunk gem celebrates the cuisine of Italy's Abruzzo region and has a gorgeous outdoor seating area that's open in the summer months. The restaurant prides itself in house-butchering and house-curing its meats and cutting its pasta by hand. Try the fettuccine verde (spring greens, garlic, hazelnuts, parmigiano reggiano) and the roast lamb shoulder. If you have room for dessert, you'll never forget the chocolate olive oil cake with whipped ricotta, ganache and vanilla gelato.

Walnut St. Cafe
walnutstreetcafe.com
If you're looking for a breath of fresh air in the congested city, Walnut St. Cafe is a great place to go for breakfast, brunch, lunch, brunch, happy hour and dinner. For early morning options, the brioche French toast goes well with a hearty cup of Rival Bros. coffee. The 30-minute lunch is great if you have to eat on the run and gives you quick-to-prepare yet delicious options like a half sandwich and soup or a hearty salad. The cherry on top, of course, is the view of the Schuylkill River when you dine outside. (Although with the floor-to-ceiling windows, you can feel like you're outdoors even in colder months.)

James Philadelphia
jamesphiladelphia.com
Back in May, James Philadelphia was finally able to reveal its outdoor seating, after months of being covered by scaffolding by the Comcast Technology Center. There are now two dozen seats for diners to enjoy their food and drinks outdoors, for brunch, lunch, dinner and happy hour. It's well-known for crab cakes and lobster bisque, but despite the warmer weather, who wouldn't be interested in trying out the James Burger?

Enjoy stunning river views at 24 as well as pizza. PROVIDED

Bistrot La Minette
623 S. 6th St.
bistrotlaminette.com
This authentic French bistro is so beautiful on the inside, you may not want to venture outside, but when warm weather season hits, it's hard not to embrace it. It's open for dinner all week and dinner and lunch on the weekends. In terms of dishes, you can't go wrong — it's all out-of-this-world good. The wine selection is also extensive, featuring French wines that are off-the-beaten path for even the most sophisticated of wine connoisseurs.

WTF is scrappy junk cookie dump?

Andy and Jenn Satinsky are the owners of Weckerly's Ice Cream. ALL PHOTOS WECKERLY'S

Hint: It's a flavor of chocolate ice cream that you can get in Philly.

JENNIFER LOGUE
jennifer.logue@metro.us

You may know Weckerly's for its delicious ice cream sandwiches, but it also serves up cones at its Fishtown location.

Given that last Thursday was National Chocolate Ice Cream Day, we thought it would be cool to find an off-the-beaten-path chocolate ice cream to find in Philadelphia.

Andy Satinsky, co-owner of Weckerly's, gave us the scoop on a pretty decadent flavor that it has available. While it always has an organic chocolate ice cream on hand, it doesn't always have scrappy junk cookie dump in chocolate.

"We take the scraps from our cookies that we make for our sandwiches and are making a chocolate ice cream with the cookie pieces mixed into it," Satinsky says. "Cookie pieces include chocolate chip, dark chocolate cookie, graham cracker and pound cake."

Move over, Ben & Jerry's. Weckerly's is coming for you with over-the-top ice cream goodness.

Satinsky also notes that working with chocolate ice cream can be tricky.

"Chocolate or cocoa itself lends a lot of solids and fat to the ice cream, so you need to formulate your other ingredients around it to make it scoopable and not so rich and heavy, so people can actually enjoy it," he says. "It's a bitter and powerful flavor. We've been fortunate that the core of our ice cream-making staff has a lot of culinary experience, and can approach making new flavors with nuance and care."

At the end of the day it's all about balance, right?

SO MANY YEARS LATER WE ARE SEEING THE SAME OLD T.O.

Terrell Owens still loves him some him. GETTY IMAGES

@RealGlenMacnow

No player I've ever met craved getting into his sport's hall of fame as much as Terrell Owens. No player ever seemed more hurt by the snub of exclusion.

So when Canton finally came calling, what did T.O. do? Well, he took his bust and stayed home.

"While I am incredibly appreciative of this opportunity, I have made the decision to publicly decline my invitation to attend the induction ceremony," Owens wrote on Twitter last week, adding, "At a later date, I will announce where and when I will celebrate my induction."

When you think about it, this may have been the most T.O. moment of his career. He got exactly what he yearned for – and then could not savor the experience with everyone else.

No player, coach or executive has ever willingly skipped the induction ceremony in the 55-year history of the Hall of Fame. Who would decline the ultimate honor of the sport? I know of one inductee a few years back who had to schedule chemotherapy appointments around the trip to Canton and still made it.

But Owens – hold your breath here – is different than anyone else. We learned that during his season-and-a-half with the Eagles, which began with hope and highlights and ended with him performing protest sit-ups in his South Jersey driveway.

And now he protests again. Perhaps it's lingering anger over being slighted by Hall of Fame voters his first two years of eligibility. Perhaps there's something else. ESPN's Marcellus Wiley said he spoke to T.O. on Friday, and was told, "Sometimes you've got to do the wrong thing for the right reason."

Asked how he interpreted that explanation, Wiley said, "It sounds like he wants to amplify some message, but I don't know what that message is."

I can't interpret it either. Maybe Owens will reveal some greater cause he's looking to publicize. Maybe he's still in a snit. But I do know this – the entire episode is unfortunate, and most especially so for T.O.

If you read Terrell Owens' autobiography, you get the story of someone who grew up lonely and scared. Someone who didn't fit in. If you followed his career, you see a pattern of self-destructive actions. I've talked to former Eagles teammates who spoke about both his brilliance and insecurity.

Last June, I sat down with Owens for a one-hour one-on-one interview. He ruefully reflected on his time in Philadelphia as a blown opportunity (though he still blamed a lot of his divorce from the Eagles on Donovan McNabb). He called Andy Reid the best coach he ever played for, and said that had he stayed, "We could have made magic for years."

But stability wasn't in the cards then. And it doesn't seem to be now. T.O. is the perennial outsider, even when he's invited into the most exclusive club in football.

Things will still go on, of course. They'll hold the enshrinement ceremony in early August, and legends will slip on those gold jackets and deliver overly long speeches. Eagles fans will be there, celebrating Brian Dawkins' induction.

Perhaps, from somewhere far away, Terrell Owens will watch it on TV. Perhaps he'll be wistful. Perhaps he'll still be mad. I don't know.

But I know one thing. He'll miss the opportunity to have all those folks in green serenade him one more time with that "T.Ooooo, T.O., T.O. T.O." song that we all sang back in 2004. And that's just sad.

Looking back at Sixers 2015 draft

Okafor was the main attraction but Holmes was the better pick.

JOVAN ALFORD
jovan.alford@metro.us

Jahlil Okafor is now a member of the Brooklyn Nets. GETTY IMAGES

Over the next couple of weeks at Metro, we will be taking a look back at the 76ers' draft classes from the last five years. The 2018 NBA Draft nine days away, so it is a good time to check out the best and worst picks by the Sixers.

To begin this series, we reviewed the 2014 draft class, which produced Joel Embiid and Dario Saric. In this installment, we will look at the draft that gave the Sixers Jahlil Okafor and not Kristaps Porzingis.

1. Jahlil Okafor (Rd. 1, Pick 3) - For a second straight year in the NBA Draft Lottery, the Sixers landed the third overall pick. With the No. 3 overall pick, there was hope that maybe the Sixers would take either D'Angelo Russell or Porzingis. Neither of those scenarios happened as the team took Jahlil Okafor out of Duke University.

Okafor had an amazing rookie season on a Sixers' team, where he was the primary scorer. The 6-foot-11 big man averaged 17.5 points and 7.0 rebounds in 30 minutes per game. Fans across the league marveled at Okafor's footwork in the post and how he could take opposing big men off the dribble.

After that outstanding rookie campaign, Okafor's production went down the next two seasons due to disappointing play and the emergence of Joel Embiid. He became the focus of numerous trade rumors and was finally dealt this past season with Nik Stauskas to the Brooklyn Nets for Trevor Booker.

2. Richaun Holmes (Rd. 2, Pick 37) - The Sixers found tremendous value in the second round with the selection of Holmes. Philadelphia was able to get Holmes thanks to the trade of K.J. McDaniels to the Houston Rockets, which netted them guard Isaiah Canaan and the second-round pick.

Holmes has become a fan favorite in the city due to his high-energy play on both sides of the ball.

3. Artuaus Gudaitis (Rd. 2, Pick 47) - A draft and stash prospect out of Lithuania, Gudaitis was known more for being involved in the infamous pick swap trade with the Sacramento Kings than his performance with the Sixers.

4. J.P. Tokoto (Rd. 2, Pick 58) - Tokoto never played in an NBA game with the Sixers because the team waived him in October 2015. But he played two seasons in the NBA G-League with the Rio Grande Valley Vipers and Oklahoma City Blue, before taking his talents overseas. This season, Tokoto played in the NBL with the Perth Wildcats.

5. Luka Mitrovic (Rd. 2, Pick 60) - Another draft and stash prospect, Mitrovic was also a part of the pick swap trade with the Kings, which came to fruition in the 2017 NBA Draft Lottery.

MODERATE TO SEVERE
ROSACEA
RESEARCH STUDY

Do you have moderate to severe rosacea?

Many people who have moderate to severe rosacea often confuse it with acne.

Do you have 12 - 40 inflamed acne-like bumps scattered across your face?

Are you one of them?

TO QUALIFY YOU MUST:
- Be an adult
- Currently have moderate to severe rosacea - a persistent red face with spider-like veins
- AND have 12 - 40 acne-like bumps on your face

QUALIFIED PARTICIPANTS:
- Will receive all study medication and study care at no cost
- May receive compensation for time
